Under these circumstances, I collected most of the useful practical problems in geometry from a variety of sources, simplified them and drew them on cards for the use of the classes, arranging them from the most easy to the more difficult, thus leading the students gradually forward; this was followed by the drawing of plans, sections, elevations and details of Buildings and Machinery, then followed Isometrical drawing, and the course was closed by the study of Linear perspective and shadows; the whole being illustrated by a series of short lectures to the private classes. I have been so well pleased with the results of this method of instruction, that I have endeavored to adopt its general features in the arrangement of the following work. The problems in constructive geometry have been selected with a view to their practical application in the every-day business of the Engineer, Architect and...
