Not illustrated. 1898 Excerpt: . . . this paper illustrate one point further, although of minor consequence. It will be seen that the long axis of the larva in fig. 25, and the long axes of the larvae derived from the same egg, in fig. 26i are approximately parallel to the principal dorso-ventral-axis of the original egg. Summary And Conclusion. An isolated blastomere of the Molgula egg segments as if still forming a corresponding part of an entire embryo. The cleavage phenomena are strictly partial, as regards the origin of cells, the inclination of cleavage-planes, and especiall y in respect to the rhythm of segmentation. The general appearance of the fragment differs materially from that of a half of a complete embryo, for the reason that rearrangements of the blastomeres occur, which tend progressively to mask the partial nature of development. The end result is a larva of less than normal size, and...
