Excerpt: . . . cause of perturbation; and the Dirge in Cymbeline tells us that The sceptre, learning, physic must All follow this and come to dust, a case of attribute and symbol instead of substance. Quality for person or thing: To fawn on rage raging man (Rich. II. v. 1). Bondage is hoarse (A3, and J.). When thus the angelic Virtue answered mild, --virtuous angel (Par. Lost). So, too, relations of time: --Nor wanting is the brown October drawn Mature and perfect, from his dark retreat Of thirty years. --Thomson. And on her (sc. the tables) ample square from side to side All Autumn piled. --Par. Lost, 5. 391. IO. TROPES OF CONTRAST. In order to express something in a very forcible way, we can use a phrase entirely unexpected, making a sharp contrast with the literal statement. It does not deceive the reader; it simply draws his attention, as by a violent gesture, to the real object. 1. Hyperbole. --This trope (the word means to cast beyond) states a fact in words that we know to be impossible or extremely improbable. It shows that we must believe as far as we can in the direction indicated. Countless houses is a term by which we understand houses so numerous that it would be very difficult to count them, or would take a long time. The hyperbole is common in all speech. In poetry it is also abundant. I was all ear, And took in strains...
